GUTTERCREST WELCOMES NEW HEAD OF PRODUCTION

Guttercrest welcomed Kenton Cawley as head of production this month. In the role, Cawley will be tasked with leading the manufacturing process at the firm's 65,000 square feet manufacturing facilities for its range of aluminium rainwater goods, reporting to managing director Gary Power.

"We are very pleased to have Kenton joining us, he has an outstanding professional background and will play a key role at Guttercrest. The knowledge and experience he brings to the role will help transition our company to the next level of production efficiency," said Mr Power.

Cawley joins Guttercrest from Haynes International, where he spent six years and most recently served as manufacturing and engineering director. In the role he led production for brands including Rolls Royce/Safran and Siemens. Cawley originally joined Haynes as an operations and engineering manager in 2012, following a decade with Doncasters Precision Machining where he was promoted to operations and engineering manager.

Cawley's arrival is the first in a series of high-profile industry appointments planned for 2019 as the firm continues to expand.

About Guttercrest

Guttercrest is a manufacturer of high-quality aluminium gutters, downpipes, fascias, soffits and copings. Manufactured in-house using cast, sheet or extruded aluminium. Each product is built with the highest quality in mind and thanks to continuous investment in technology. All products are available with short lead times and at competitive prices.

Founded in 1980 as a small family business who specialised in installing aluminium seamless gutters and downpipes. The business grew organically into manufacturing – developing an extensive range of aluminium rainwater goods and eaves products. In 2004, the company changed focus to concentrate completely on design, manufacture and supply of their popular rainwater products.

The company philosophy is based on their roots of installation, thinking as an installer and not just a manufacturer. This is reflected in the design, technical and production teams who expertly guide clients through the specification process.
